

Emory University Symposium for Psychoanalysis and Politics

Time and Dates: 9:00am-6:30pm, October 20-22, 2022.

Location: Emory University Psychoanalytic Institute, 6 Executive Park Drive NE

Keynote Speakers: Adrian Johnston, Patricia Gherovici, Jamieson Webster, Joan Copjec.

Overview: The Emory University Symposium for Psychoanalysis and Politics (SPAP) is bringing together a range of scholars to discuss the relationship between psychoanalysis and politics. Over the course of three days, the Symposium's participants will deliver and discuss presentations on a variety of thinkers, such as Lacan, Marx, Fanon, Althusser, Freud, Jung, Hegel, Kant, Irigaray, Anzaldúa, and many others.

Modality: SPAP is a hybrid event with participants joining us both virtually and in-person. For in-person attendees, the Symposium will be hosted at the Emory University Psychoanalytic Institute. If you wish to attend via Zoom, please reach out to us at emorySPAP@gmail.com.

Details and Structure: Admitted symposium participants will be delivering 15-20-minute oral presentations on papers, articles, excerpts and sections from dissertations or current book projects, etc.

If you would like a full schedule, or if you have any questions, please don't hesitate to get in contact with us: EmorySPAP@gmail.com.

This event is sponsored by the Emory University Philosophy Department, the Comparative Literature Department, the French and Italian Department, the Psychoanalytic Studies Program, and the Hightower Fund.
